Hidden Treasure

'Our vocation is to appreciate ourselves as the pearl of great price. We get to discover ourselves as the treasure in the field and to rejoice with God in the wondrous work that God does in each of our lives. I will never exhaust the mystery that is me.' [1]

'The psychologist Rollo May believes that the neurosis of our age is that we're afraid to be all that we are. That is, we're afraid to accept the full potential of who we are and what we're called to be, because if we accept it, we just might have to stand up and bear witness to it. And we also have trepidation in admitting the potential within us because we don't know what it will ask of us if we give ourselves to it. But the price paid for the half-lived life is bitter. [2]

The pearl of great price within us is God in whose image we are created. We have fleeting moments of finding this treasure but in order to 'own' who we truly are, we have to let go of those 'possessions' which prevent us from enjoying our treasure and fully living who we truly are. 'Anything or anyone that does not bring you alive is too small for you.' [3]

Like Solomon in today's first reading, we ask God for the gift of discernment. 'Discernment is not the same as decision making. Reaching a decision can be straightforward: we consider our goals and options and then we choose the actions that meet our goals most effectively. Discernment, on the other hand, is about listening and responding to that place within us where our deepest desires align with God's desire.

As discerning people, we sift through our impulses, motives, and options to discover which ones lead us closer to divine love and compassion for ourselves and other people and which ones lead us further away. We come to realise that what previously seemed so important for our lives loses its power over us. Discernment reveals new priorities, directions, and a deepening awareness of our inner, hidden treasure.' [4]

The work of the Holy Spirit in our lives is to reveal to us the truth of our being so that the way of our being can match it. (Wm. Paul Young)
